

of the neurological chemical reactions that occur when translations die. I have sensory needs permanently unfulfilled by a world that wasn't built for my common sense. I still carry the scars on my arms from when zombies first attacked and I did not know how to ward them off.